PEACE PARLEYS RESUMED

Rapid Progress on Work of Fixing Terms for Germany Now is Expected; Ready for Signatures Between Middle and End of March, Forecast.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan 26—President Wilson yesterday made his first trip to the battle front and devastated regions, visiting Chateau Thierry and Rheims At the close of a tour that took him through a dozen razed villages ending in the ruins of the historic cathedral at Rheims, he made this comment.

"No one can put into words the impressions I have received among such scenes of desolation and ruin

That was Mr Wilson's only expression of his feelings after a trip that every Frenchman has been hoping he would make before he takes part in deciding what is to be exacted from Germany for the devastation of Northern France

PARIS Jan 27—The supreme council of the peace conference met at 10 o'clock this morning. There was a full attendance of the members There appears every prospect that the peace conference will make rapid progress from now on with the work of fixing the peace terms for Germany as the conference appears to have gotten into its stride A high French diplomatic authority is quoted by the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail as estimating that the conference will have the peace terms ready for submission for ratification by the various national governments between the middle and the end of March If this is achieved the German delegates will be summoned to Paris early in April for the conclusion of peace

The supreme council adjourned at 12 15 o'clock. President Wilson went at once to the Hotel De Crillon the American headquarters where he had a conference with Colonel E M House

Samuel Gompers and other labor representatives had been in conference with the American delegation The discussion was immediately suspended upon the Presidents arrival to permit him to have a private talk with Colonel House

The delegates of the small powers will meet at the foreign office this afternoon to choose their representatives to sit on the commissions provided for in the resolution adopted by the peace congress on Saturday It was understood this morning that the great powers had undertaken to reconsider the decision that the small powers shall have between them only five members on these commissions Without waiting for a decision on this question however the commission will get to work at once

PARIS, Jan 27—The Socialists of France must make a choice between following President Wilson of the United States or Premier Lenine of Russia This declaration was made at an excited meeting of Socialists in Paris Sunday by M Loriot after the Socialist leaders Albert Thomas Pierre Renaudel and M Longuet were shouted down when they tried to speak

"KNOCKS DOWN" FARES

The Pittsburg Conductor is Given Year to Jail For Embezzlement.

Robert Wolfe a conductor of the Pittsburg Railways company was sentenced to imprisonment for one year in the Allegheny county jail and ordered to pay the costs Saturday by Judge John C Haymaker in Pittsburg on a charge of embezzling fares of the company

Wolf's system of concealing his shortage has caused considerable discussion, as he had declared in court that other employes had suggested the plan to him Attorney James Francis Burke representing the company in addressing the court stated that these embezzlements were working a serious detriment to the company to the public, and to all conductors upon whom they unjustly cast suspicion

Judge Haymaker in sentencing Wolf stated that inasmuch as it was a serious case and that it was an example for those with similar opportunities he felt that an effort should be made to breaking up this practice as the public at large as well as the company was interested and that imprisonment should act as a warning

TEN YANK DIVISIONS ARE SUGGESTED FOR ARMY OF OCCUPATION

More Already Designated for Return Home Than Originally Proposed By Marshal Foch.

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON Jan 27—General March chief of staff, informed the Senate Military Committee today that shipping arrangements had been made by which 300 000 men might be transported home monthly and that all of the American expeditionary force could be returned home and demobilized within six months

There are still about 785 000 men in camps in the United States and all will be demobilized within a month from today except those retained for overhead duty General March added Up to noon last Saturday he said 104 000 men had arrived from overseas

How many Americans will be held abroad in the army of occupation is to be determined by President Wilson General March stated but more Americans already have been designated for return home than originally proposed by Marshal Foch He indicated that 10 divisions had been suggested as America's contribution to the army of occupation

Discussing demobilization plans generally with the committee, General March said retention of an American standing army of 500 000 was proposed.

We don't ever expect to reduce below 500 000 men—at we can help it he said

Tonnage sufficient to transport 300 000 men monthly will be available he explained through ships allotted by the Allies, combined with German passenger tonnage and the negotiations for which are practically completed

With about 1 800 000 Americans still overseas the chief of staff said a shipping capacity of 300 000 monthly should make it possible to return and demobilize all within six months

If the President agrees to leave 10 divisions or whatever number in the army of occupation he said, we can make it in less time From the beginning General Pershing was instructed to return men as fast as shipping was available

INTEREST CENTERS ON CHANGES AMONG STATE APPOINTEES

Election of Resident Clerk of the House Likely to Come Up Tonight.

SECRETARY RASMUSSEN

Working on Bill to Reorganize the Department of Agriculture, May Be New Members of the Compensation Board and in Labor Department.

Special Correspondence of The Courier

HARRISBURG Jan 27—Interest in tonight's session of the legislature centers in the identity of the man who will be chosen to succeed William S Leib of Pittsville as resident clerk of the House of Representatives Leib was reasonably certain a month ago that he would be retained on the job but his anti organization efforts of pre primary days last spring had aroused organization leaders who demanded his decapitation Following publication in Philadelphia and Pittsburg newspapers of the fact that leaders were after him Leib the middle of last week announced that he was not a candidate for re-election The job pays $5,000 a year and the holder is not overburdened with work Leib's particular sin for which he is about to be penalized was his activity on behalf of Paul Houck of Shenandoah named to succeed his father Henry Houck as secretary of internal affairs Paul Houck was a candidate last May for the Republican nomination for this place His manager was Bill Leib who is blamed for the entrance into the fight of an obscure James Woodward of Ashland who presence greatly endangered the chances of James H Woodward slated by the Republican organization for the nomination The Ashland Woodward was canned through the courts but that did not relieve Leib of the odium

It is not expected that the coming week will see any startling changes in any departments on the hill Governor Sproul has a number of important places to fill He must name an insurance commissioner for example, and two places are to be filled on the Public Service commission It is whispered that James Foust of Altoona pure food commissioner is to be let go because of his activities on behalf of Governor Brumbaugh and J Denny O'Neil And a successor is spoken of for Walter McNichols acting head of the Labor and Industry department The mining board is rumored for George F Lumb acting commissioner of the State Police and for James W Leech and John A Scott—Ebensburg and Indiana—who are members of the Workmen's Compensation Board

But nothing startling will occur in the Agricultural department for example until the new secretary Frederick Rasmussen has had time to prepare a bill which will embody the changes Governor Sproul desires made in that department The State Board of Agriculture at its session here last week approved a bill which it will have introduced in the legislature but that is about as far as the measure will get Governor Sproul for years has been watching the Agricultural Department and has well formed ideas as to what it is not doing and what it should be doing The department has been of not great value for the last four years Secretary Patton taking very little interest in it and the Commission of Agriculture at all times being at odds with Patton and some of the time with Governor Brumbaugh When Secretary Rasmussen gets a line on things and the reorganization of the department is decided upon friends of the governor will introduce proper bills Until that time comes the Agricultural Commission which resigned last week will be on the job The governor did not

Largest Chorus of Week Is Present, Many Hear Story of Mrs. Goosman.

L Cairns ably discoursed to an audience of at least 1 000 last night in the Methodist Episcopal church at the union revival Galleries Sunday school room church auditorium platform and every available part of the church was crowded The largest chorus of the week was present The presence of Bill Brooks in the choir was a heartening thing Mrs Goosman sang a touching solo

Rev Cairns used The Sword of the Spirit effectively last night When the altar call was given penitents began to crowd toward the altar until it was filled At least fifteen were converted last night

The Story of Redeeming Grace was Mrs Goosman's topic in the mass meeting which filled the Methodist Episcopal church in the afternoon meeting Mr and Mrs Goosman sang a duet and then Mrs Goosman related her story She told how she was converted at the age of twelve and then little by little she got away from God by singing in the movies then as dancer on the stage then as a vaudeville actress and last as an artists model when her home was broken up But God in some way got hold of her heart on the stage and brought her to conviction to salvation and to her husband from whom she had been separated for more than two years It was a touching recital of what sin can do for those who trifle with it Many came to the altar at the close of Mrs Goosman's address The Goosmans will have charge of another service at the same place next Sunday afternoon

There will be an open air meeting on Brimstone Corner tonight at 7 P M The regular service at the church at 7 30 P M The evangelists will be in charge

MODIFICATION OF RATES NOT TO END FIGHT

That Was Opinion Expressed Today But Committee Will Make Decision.

CONFERENCE TO BE CALLED

Mayor John Duggan, Head of Movement to Oppose West Penn Fare Increase Planned to Hect With Solicitor Today, New Schedule Tomorrow

That the modification of rates announced by the West Penn Railways company to go into effect at midnight tonight will not alter the opposition against an increase was the opinion of Attorney L C Higbee who is conducting the legal end of the protest which has been filed with the Public Service Commission It is my understanding that the protest was filed against any increase that might be made said Attorney Higbee this morning

Mayor John Duggan said this morning that personally he was in favor of carrying the fight out to a finish He said although the company had made modifications he could see in its revised schedule that where traffic was heavy the high rates still applied the modified increase affecting the districts where there was restricted traffic One illustration of that feature of the modified schedule he pointed out was on the Connellsville-Vanderbilt branch From Connellsville to Leisenring a heavy traffic district, two fares are charged and from Leisenring to Dickerson Run only one fare.

Mayor Duggan said he intended going to Uniontown today to consult Attorney Higbee on the matter and to arrange for a meeting of the representative committees from Westmoreland and Fayette counties to be held the latter part of this week to determine what course of action should be taken

Attorney Higbee said this morning he believed the Public Service Commission would set a date today for the hearing to be held on the rate question

If at the meeting to be held later this week it is determined to go through with the fight against the increase the circulation of the supplementary and financial petitions will go on Quite a sum of money to back the fight has been raised up to this time it is reported returns of petitions from different parts of the two counties indicating that liberal contributions are being made

DAILY HEALTH TALKS

The Troubles Women Have

BY L. MAC LEAN, M. D.

Probably no man in America was ever better qualified to successfully treat the diseases peculiar to women than Dr Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. The cases that come to him run into many thousands, giving him an experience that rarely comes to any one man. Dr. Pierce found that in nearly every case there were certain vegetable growths which rarely failed to give prompt relief in those feminine disorders from which so many women suffer. He combined these roots and herbs into a temperance medicine that he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for that is precisely what it was. This medicine is sold in both liquid and tablet form by druggists everywhere. Favorite Prescription is a distinct remedy for women and acts directly upon the organs that characterize the sex. It is not necessary to take a long course of treatment with this standard medicine. A weakly, sickly, backachy, headachy, nervous, despondent woman, with regular or irregular pains—with feminine disorders that come in youth or middle age—is pretty sure to find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the exact remedy that her condition calls for, and to find it after a very few doses are taken. Why women should allow themselves to stay sick when a very little money spent for this remedy will probably make them well, is something no one can explain.

All women who suffer from feminine disorders are invited to write the Faculty of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., for free confidential consultation and advice, no charge being made for this high professional service. This will enable every woman to benefit by the advice of the distinguished corps of physicians which Dr. Pierce has gathered about him in his celebrated Buffalo institution.

When constipation is present with feminine disorders, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken along with Favorite Prescription. Try them now!

Hooper says he can't afford to leave his ranch in California.

WOMAN WINS FIGHT TO REGAIN HEALTH

Mrs. Sallie H. Kulp ,2031 N. 21st St., Phila., pays a high tribute for the aid she received from the use of Tanlac. "I suffered from a badly run-down system and an 'all in' tired feeling. My liver seemed sluggish and I felt sleepy and lifeless much of the time. I lost pounds in weight. My son's illness and death during the grip epidemic caused me to lose heart. Someone at our house suggested Tanlac. I've taken over four bottles and I've gained back forty pounds of good weight and feel so much better in every way."

The genuine Tanlac, which bears the name J. I. Gore Co., on outside carton, is sold here by Beighley's Pharmacy, Connellsville Drug Co., Fred H. Harmening, P. W. Hetzel and other leading druggists. Tanlac, the celebrated vegetable tonic, stomachic and health builder, is also sold in neighboring cities and towns. Ask for it.

GERMAN GLOOM.

The Germans' recent bad luck led Representative Shouse of Kansas to say at a dinner:

"German defeats on the western front and German disappointments in the east have lowered the morale of the German people terribly. The German people are now as gloomy as the broker.

"'Did you have a good day, love?' a broker's wife asked him in the evening at dinner.

"'Rotten,' the broker groaned. 'Simply rotten. Everything I sold went down.'

"He ate soup in grim silence a little while, then he muttered:

"'Thank goodness they couldn't go sideways.'"

EXTRA PAY FOR SOLDIERS.

Several plans are before Congress and the country to have extra pay awarded to men who have been in the military and naval service of the United States during the war with Germany. What is claimed to be the original plan, and started in Norfolk soon after the armistice was signed, asks that full twelve months' pay be given to all men, whether they went overseas or not. Other plans provide for smaller bonuses, one already introduced in Congress being for one month's extra pay; another that is being urged makes the allowance six months' pay; another, originating in the Pennsylvania Legislature, recommends that the extra compensation be equal to three months' pay. The arguments in support of the plans are very much the same in all cases being based upon a recognition, other than their regular pay, of the sacrifices the men made by severing their business and employment ties in order to become soldiers.

"This is a moral issue," says the proponents of the one year plan. "The men of the service worked or fought night and day for whatever the government chose to pay them; they did not strike, neither did they get ten per cent plus. They only obeyed orders. The only record we have of a whole company disobeying orders was that one of our companies were charging the Huns and the officer gave orders to halt, but they captured several German dugouts before obeying him.

"Some people oppose the plan because it will cost the government three billion dollars, saying that we are not able to stand it. Such statements are an insult to the flag, for our experts tell us that it would have cost us over 25 billion dollars per year to have carried the war on several years longer and they further state that we could have financed it for a number of years under our same Liberty Bond plan.

"There is no charity in this plan. It will only give the men what they have earned thrice and a very small portion of what they deserve. How much would we have had if it had not been for the men of the service?

"Would it be giving our service men a fair deal to only give them a one month bonus when their commercial competitors have saved a few thousand dollars for a rainy day, while the gates of our national treasury were swung wide open from necessity?"

While sound arguments are presented in favor of giving to the service men a substantial measure of recognition for the sacrifices they made in taking upon themselves the obligations of soldiers, each of the three plans is open to the same objection. They all provide a fixed level of extra compensation, over and above that paid during active service, and without regard to the length of service. As most people look at the question it would appear much more equitable and fair if the extra pay were based upon a fixed amount per month of service, with a minimum for all discharged men who had been in service for a minimum period before the official proclamation of peace. Under such a plan the men would receive extra pay in proportion to the time they had been deprived of the larger emoluments they were receiving in civil pursuit at the time they entered the service, and therefore equitable, the purpose of the plan, being, as we understand it, to in part compensate service men for the losses they have sustained by abandonment of their ordinary vocations to become soldiers or sailors.

The men who have helped save civilization for the world cannot be overpaid but it would accord more with the accepted ideas of fairness if the extra pay were distributed on the basis of actual time served rather than give the men who had been on duty here or in France from the beginning of the war until its close the same amount as the men who were mustered in shortly before the end came.

The 22nd Congressional District, and the whole of the state of Pennsylvania suffers a distinct loss in the death of Congressman Robbins. Indefatigable in guarding the interests of his district he had become as invaluable a public servant as he was useful as a citizen. It will take a capable man to fill his place.

Germany is finding it some job to qualify for a seat at the peace table.

Some of the patrons of the West Penn Railways company, particularly those living at Dunbar, Dickerson Run, Leisenring and Pennsville, will have to be shown how they are to benefit from the latest revised schedule of rates.

If some other people would do as much as the weatherman is doing to bring about a downward readjustment of living prices the average citizen would soon be able to take some change home after making purchase of the usual supply of table and wearing necessities.

Captain J. Ed. Boyle, of the 110th Regiment Machine Gun Company, having been one of them, knows what he is talking about when he says this regiment had "a great bench of fighters."

Rippling Rhymes

THE UNFORTUNATES.

"Oh, come and feed our faces," the abject Germans whine; "in countless Prussian places men have no chance to dine; their kultured works are hollow, they have no roasts to swallow, no pie or cake to follow, and neither beer nor wine. Americans!" they bellow, "pray feed the Germans first; we know we're punk and yellow, but feed us till we burst; send on your cooks and waiters and feed our yawning craters with beef and yams and taters, and kraut and liverwurst." Oh, chee, if I were bossing this graft of dishing grub, no pies would I be tossing to any Prussian dub, till all the other critters were given cakes and fritters, ice cream and stomach bitters, and grape juice by the tub. I'd say to Fritz and Heinie, "Shoost vait! The waiting's good you get no morsel tiny of rich, uplifting food, till all the other nations have had abundant rations; so can your lamentations, and saw a rick of wood. You lose at every clatter when you appeal to me: for you're a whole-lot fatter than hungry men should be; your fat's in folds and creases, and yet you bring valises to carry off the pieces of all the grub you see. My first chore will be feeding my friends, heroic souls! they'll get the bread they're needing and soup in flowing bowls; and you, the licked, the beaten, may come when they have eaten the doughnuts crisp and wheaten, and gather up the holes."

The Battle of Camp Jackson.

By a Participant.

In the wilds of South Carolina, in the wilderness of sand,
Where the underbrush and sickly oaks
abound on every hand;
We are camped in dreary exile doomed
to vegetate and rot,
The outside world forgotten and by the world forgot.

It seems an age since we left home to seek this godless land;
Two hundred miles of dusty roads, a hundred more of sand,
The sunbaked men and worn out mules
the story meekly tell,
How we have rode this country on the trail that leads to hell.

No charms of nature greet us; no cool and shady dells;
No rippling, bubbling brook is here,
nor sound of village bells;
No charming maiden greets us with any enticing wink,
It's isolation everywhere and not a drop to drink.

Caroline, Oh! Caroline, where is the Pabst and Schlitz,
The sight of your darned sand hills makes me throw a thousand fits.
God should have worked the seventh day regardless of the weather,
Or did He leave it in this shape to hold the earth together?

Around us forest fires rage, our throats are parched and dry;
The burning sun shines down on us
from in the dismal sky,
Mosquitos, flies and rattlesnakes, help
weave a charming spell;
Had we a barrel of brimstone we could start a first class hell.

The flies are armed with corkscrews,
the mosquitos all wear spurs,
The rocks are full of copperheads and the sand is full of burrs;
The hills are full of rattlesnakes and the air is full of fleas,
The incinerator also lends it's fragrance to the breeze

Oh! for the gift of language to describe this blasted place;
I've cursed it and I've darned it till
I'm purple in the face.
In French and Spanish; in German and other tongues unknown,
And wished that I was back there to place that they call home.

I've scanned the books of synonyms
to find a fitting name,
I've searched all through the proverbs
but it seems a losing game.
No adjectives e'er written can portray
it's thousand ills;
It's the end of the universe; a dump between two hills.

You may talk about the hardships of the Israelites of old,
'Tis true they did some penance when they made a calf of gold.
But though they stood it forty years
in trials and various ways,
If exiled at Camp Jackson they'd have died in forty days.

The high-browed Kaiser sent me here.
May lightning strike him dead,
And may the curse of Thor strike him upon his blasted head.
May he be scalped and skinned alive
and hung upon his throne,
And may his eyes never see again until I get back home.

And joy to me it sure would be, to have him here to tease.
A rise about his neck so all in camp
could take a squeeze.
The mention of his fiendish name
makes any wise man rave
I'd gladly hike ten thousand miles to look upon his grave.

BULWARKS OF NATION

Public Schools and Teachers Thus Described at Uniontown Gathering.

Tribute to the public schools as the bulwark of American ideals and to the public school teacher as the force which instilled those ideals into the American soldiery, thus beginning at the very fountain head of American education and exaltation of liberty and the privilege of freedom were paid Saturday afternoon by Rev. E. A. Hodil of the Third Presbyterian church, Uniontown, in his address to the Fayette county school teachers assembled in the high school auditorium there for the county educational rally and the dedication of their service flag with its 122 stars, five of them gold. The gold stars were in honor of Floyd Strosnider, principal of the Smithfield high school; George L. Dawson, former instructor in the Uniontown high school, William Hyatt, teacher in Stewart township; Louis L. Fitzgerald, teacher in Bullskin township, and N. J. McCreary, instructor in North Union high school.

The dedicatory service came at the close of an interesting session devoted to professional discussion of various school subjects and the questions regarding the shortened term and it was opened by Superintendent Robert C. Shaw of the Westmoreland county schools, who read the great poem, "On Flanders Fields the Poppies Grow." Dr. J. H. Alleman of the Uniontown public schools made a brief address and Prof. C. G. Pierce of Pitcairn led the calisthenic drill.

The Anxious Seat

THE FAULT OF MAN.

Seems to me there's beauty here in all things if we'll find it.
No cloud goes drifting across the sky
but has the sun behind it.
The Lord ain't making ugliness to mar His marvelous plan;
When something spoils the landscape here, the work's been done
by man

Since Eve and Adam first went wrong and told themselves they knew Much better than did God Himself
just what they ought to do,
The human race has kept right on in that bull-headed way,
Quitting the paths that God mapped out and wandering astray.

In one way or another we are Eves
and Adams still;
We pile up debts of vain regrets and
sadly pay the bill;
We listen to the serpent's words
(they're easy to believe)
And then we wonder, when we've sinned, why we were born to grieve

Don't think I'm preaching to you now; I'm noticing a fact.
What mars the beauty of the world is how we mortals act.
God made this earth a garden spot,
but since the race began
I'm forced to say it hasn't had the best of care from man.

HIGH CLASS GROCERIES

If you are not a customer of our grocery departments, you miss lots of good things and are losing money. Now consider, we have sixty-three of the largest, most prosperous grocery stores in Fayette and Westmoreland Counties; we are daily receiving for the customers of these stores carloads of the highest class groceries in the market, coming from points as far away as California, the Pacific Coast, coming from all through Western and Eastern points. The goods are distributed to our numerous stores according to the needs of the business. We have had this fall and winter in transit over two hundred carloads of goods at one time, consisting of all sorts of groceries, including canned goods from Maryland points, from Western points, and the Pacific coast, flour, potatoes, feed, hay, cabbage, and other goods sold by grocers. Now this is almost a continuous performance. Our carload shipments come to Everson, our distributing point, sometimes they are so numerous it congests the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. We merely mention these facts to impress you with our big business and the advantage we have in buying. The object in giving you that further is to impress on you the fact that our customers get the advantage of our close cash buying. Our prices are lower, our goods are high class, in many instances superior, to what competitors are offering you. If you are not a customer, look us up.

NAZIMOVA in "EYE FOR EYE"

THE SOISSON.

"EYE FOR EYE"—In which Nazimova is seen in the leading role of Hassouna, has created new and greater heights in the annals of the silent drama. The production and acting are both of superlative quality. The picture is being shown today and tomorrow. Hassouna, a young and very beautiful Arabian girl, lives in the tented city of her tribe in the desert. Here comes Captain Cadiere, an officer of the French navy in pursuit of his duty. In a religious frenzy the tribe capture and make him prisoner, intending to kill him at dawn. Hassouna has seen the handsome young Frenchman and falls in love with him. By strategy she affects his release and escape and then confesses her deed to her father. The tribe is enraged at her act and condemn her to death—choosing to abandon her in the desert where she will perish from thirst. She is rescued by another tribe who take her to the city of Tangiers and sell her as a dancing girl to a travelling circus.

After many hardships and much ill-usage at the hands of the brutal manager of the circus she is rescued and taken to the home of the man she aided in the desert. In the scenes in which she does the dance of the Veils she holds the audience in the palm of her hand—not a sound to break the rapt attention with which her work is received. It is a picture which arrests the attention and expands the imagination—transporting the beholder to the heart of things Oriental and mysterious telling a story of intrigue and passion, which is not to be surpassed.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE TESTING OF MILDRED VANE."—A story of mystery, love and mirth, is the attraction at the Paramount theatre today, starring the popular actress, May Allison. The play is a unique combination of mystery and drama with a dash of light comedy cleverly worked in. Spiritualism figures prominently in the plot which tells the story of a man who believes that it is possible to make the dead suffer through the cruelties inflicted on the living. This man, Dr. Hernandez, loved Mildred's mother, but was refused by her when she married Matthew Vane. After many years, with hatred still uppermost in his heart, he decides on a fiendish plot by which he proposes to take revenge on both Mildred and her father, and in this manner—through the sufferings of her loved ones—torture the heart of the dead woman. His methods are cleverly worked out in this remarkable play, but he is foiled in his plans by young Albert Moreland, a professor of Greek, and the girl herself. In the role of Mildred May Allison is seen at her best. Tomorrow's picture is "The Man Who Would Not Tell," starring Earle Williams.

SCOTTDALE THEATRE.

"THE GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND."—Of the interesting drama to be presented by a capable company at the Scottdale Theatre on Tuesday, January 28, the Dubuque, (Iowa) Times-Journal said: "The Girl He Left Behind" presented at the Majestic last night is 100 per cent American drama from start to finish. In addition to the splendid cast, there are two old veterans—Union and Confederate—who furnish wholesome comedy throughout the play, indulging in heated but humorous arguments over the days of 1861-65. This is the best attraction that has appeared at the Majestic this season. This is not a motion picture, but is a real play.

Names of men who voluntarily enlisted are, in particular, apt to be missing from the Honor Roll unless furnished by their families or friends. But all names, whether those of men who enlisted or who entered the service by draft selection are wanted.

Commodore Lionel de L. Wells of the British navy, who organized the system by which United States troops and supplies were convoyed to Europe, is now preparing to return to England as his work in this country is finished. MRS. MAY COULD NOT WORK

Made Well and Strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbia, Pa.—"I was very weak and run down and had dragging-down pains and pains in my back. I could not get around to do my work and had to sit down and rest often during the day. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the papers and read the testimonials, so I thought I would try it. Now I am healthier than I ever was in my life, and can recommend it to any woman who suffers as I did."—Mrs. ELIZABETH MAY, R.F.D. No. 1, Columbia, Pa.

The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills is because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence, and the letters which we are constantly publishing from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of this famous root and herb medicine.

NORWIN WINS OVER CONNELLSVILLE BY ONE POINT, 32-31

Locals Lead Up Until Last Quarter But Are Unable to Make the Necessary Goal.

Failure to shoot with accuracy in the closing minutes of the game Saturday night caused the defeat of Connellsville by the Norwin high school at the gymnasium, 32-31. A single basket by Connellsville would have won the game, and though the ball struck the rim several times it would fall off after hesitating for a tantalizing second.

The Cokers took the lead from the beginning of the game and were several points ahead at the end of the first half. In the opening period of the second half Norwin got the jump and began to close up the Connellsville lead. The locals became a little wild in their shooting, although the standard of the passing was kept up, but inability to "locate" the basket allowed the visitors to close in.

In the last five minutes with but a single score separating Connellsville from victory the interest of the game became intense. Shouts from the spectators filled the gym with a continual roar and the players set a pace that could not have been kept up for long. The ball was in the air when the last whistle blew.

The lineup:

Lyon	forward	McMunn
Buttermore	forward	Davis
Jim McConnell	center	Haines
Danner	guard	Creighton

Field goals—McMunn 6; Buttermore 4; Lyon 4; Jim McConnell 2; Davis 2; Haines 2; Danner.

$750,000,000 NEEDED

For Upkeep of Railroads Under Government Control.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The railroad administration needs $750,000,000 more for its revolving fund to supplement the $500,000,000 originally provided and now practically exhausted. In preparing this estimate for Congress today, Director General Hines explained that $196,000,000 of this sum represents loss to the government, incurred in operations last year, and the remainder represents advances to railroad companies to be paid eventually with interest.

Congress will be asked immediately to appropriate this amount which Mr. Hines declared would be necessary regardless of whether the railroads were returned to private management within a few months or retained longer.

WEAKNESS REMAINS LONG AFTER Influenza

Reports Show That Strength, Energy and Ambition Return Very Slowly to Grippe Patients.

After an attack of influenza, doctors advise that nature be assisted in its building-up process by the use of a good tonic—one that will not only put strength and endurance into the body, but will also help to build up and strengthen the run-down cells of the brain.

One of the most highly recommended remedies to put energy into both body and brain is Bio-feren—your physician knows the formula—it is printed below.

There's iron in Bio-feren—the kind of iron that makes red blood corpuscles and creates vigor. There is lecithin also; probably the best brain invigorator known to science. Then there is good old reliable gentian, that brings back your lagging appetite.

There are other ingredients that help to promote good health, as you can see by reading this formula, not forgetting kolo, that great agent that puts the power of endurance into weak people.

Taken altogether Bio-feren is a splendid active tonic that will greatly help any weak, run-down person to regain normal strength, energy, ambition and endurance.

Bio-feren is sold by all reliable druggists and is inexpensive. For weakness after influenza patients are advised to take two tablets after each meal and one at bed time—seven a day, until health, strength and vigor are fully restored.

It will not fail to help you and if for any reason you are dissatisfied with results your druggist is authorized to return your money upon request—without any red tape of any kind.

Note to physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren, it is printed on every package. Here it is: Lecithin; Calcium Glycero-phosphate; Iron Peptonate, Manganese Peptonate; Ext. Nux Vomica; Powdered Gentian; Phenolphthalein; Oleoresin Capsicum, Kola.

CHAPTER XII.

All this while Daphne was kept in readiness to take Miss Kemble's part in case the illness of her child should result in death and in the further case that she should be unable to finish her performances. With the theatrical season in such bad estate and most of Reben's companies and theaters losing money heavily, Sheila Kemble was his one certain dependence. He called her his breadwinner.

Miss Kemble's baby passed the crisis and recovered. And then the mother, worn out with the double strain, caught a little chill that became a blinding, choking cold. She went through the Saturday matinee in a whisper, but the night performance was beyond her.

And now at last Daphne's chance arrived. The Saturday night house was enormous in spite of the heat. There were enough people there to make fourteen hundred dollars—twenty-five hundred for the day.

Daphne, trudging to the theater for her usual stupid rebuff, walked into this crisis of her life.

Reben himself knocked at her dressing room door where Miss Winsor was helping her with her make-up. He implored her to be calm and he was so tremulous that he stuttered. He told her that if she made good he would let her play the part till Miss Kemble got well. He would pay her a handsome bonus. He would put her out at the head of a number two company next season.

Batterson came at last and ordered him off the stage. Reben obeyed him. Then Batterson talked to her. He told her that there was no reason to fear the house. A Saturday night audience was always easy. It wanted its money's worth! It would help to get it.

"I see," said Daphne. "I'm not afraid of the audience."

"Then what on earth are you afraid of?"

"I'm afraid of me!"

Batterson laughed scornfully. "Oh, you! You're going to score a knockout. You're going to make a big hit!"

"Yes," said Daphne, "so you've always told me."

The curtain rose. Miss Winsor and the young man skipped onto their job; the butler stalked; Eldon entered and made his exit. Mrs. Vining spread her skirts and sailed on, then Eldon went back. Finally Daphne's cue came.

She was startled a little as Batterson nudged her forward. She went to the door and opened it on her new career to make her public debut with the all-important "How d' you do?"

She saw before her the drawing room in a weird light. Beyond it was a fiercely radiant fog and beyond that an agglomeration of faces—the mass of tomato cans that she was not going to be afraid of.

And she was not afraid. She was curious to study them. She was eager to remember her lines. And she remembered them. Then cues came more or less far apart and each evoked from her mind the appropriate answer. She made never a slip and yet she began to realize that Mr. Eldon seemed unhappy.

At length she realized that the audience was strangely quiet. A sense of vacuity emptiness oppressed her. She went on with her lines. She understood at last that she was getting no laughs. She was not provoking those uncontrolling roars that Sheila Kemble brought forth. The audience had evidently had a hard week.

She decided that she must be playing too quietly; she quickened her tempo and threw more vivacity into her manner. She moved briskly about the scene, to Eldon's bewilderment. He seemed unable to find her.

She went through to the bitter end and spoke every line. But the audience was not with her for a moment. She used all her intellect to find the secret of its pleasure, but she could not surprise it. She tried harder and harder, acted with the intense devotion of a wrestling bout, but she could not score a point.

The company looked worried and jaded. The audience would not rise to anything—humor, pathos, thrill. When the play was over everyone seemed to avoid her.

She rubbed off her make-up and resumed her mufti. As she walked out on the darkened stage she saw Batterson. He tried to escape, but she checked him.

"Tell me frankly, Mr. Batterson, what was the matter with my performance tonight."

"Come to the office Monday and we'll have a little talk."

"And I'll get my notice."

"I didn't say that."

"What would you honestly advise me to do?"

"I understand that you don't have to act. Go home and get married."

"I won't."

"Then go home and don't get married."

"I won't go home."

"There's one other place to go. Good night."

He walked off and she was left alone. She had the stage to herself. She stood in the big void and felt alien—forever alien. She shook her head. This place was not for her. She had been tried in the balance and found wanting. She wondered if there were anywhere a balance that she could bring down.

She dreaded the forlorn journey home to her dreary room. As she stepped out of the door someone moved forward with uplifted hat. It was Tom Duane. He looked very spick and span. His smile illumined the dull street and his hand clasped hers with a saving strength. It lifted her from the depths like a rope let down from the sky.

Daphne would have been more content if Duane had been Clay Wimburn. It was Clay's duty to be there at such a time, of all times.

Of course he did not know that this night was to be crucial for her, but he should have known. Mr. Duane knew. It never occurred to Daphne that Reben had warned Duane of the debut of his protegee and had invited him—in fact, had dared him—to watch the test of her abilities.

All she knew was that Duane was proffering homage and smiles and the prefaces of courtship. Daphne might have failed to gain the hearts of her audience, for all her toil, but here was a heart that was hers without effort.

Perhaps Duane was her career. He was at least an audience that she could sway. And she was miserably in need of some one that would pay her the tribute of submission.

So now when he said, "Won't you let me take you home in my car?" she could hardly snub a heaven-sent messenger.

She said, "Thank you—you're very kind—but—" "Oh, all right!" And she bounded in.

When Duane said: "You must be hungry after all that hard work. Aren't you?" she said, "Yes, I guess I am—a little."

When he said, "Where shall we eat?" she answered, "Anywhere."

"Claremont?" he suggested.

This startled her, gave her pause. Yet there was something piquant about the proposal.

Satan or Raphael had whispered to her an invitation to revisit the scene of her late humiliation with Clay. With Duane's magic purse there would be no danger of a snub from the waiters; with his own car there would be no risk of footing it home.

Then an imp of mischief spoke for her and said, "All right!"

Duane told the chauffeur and the car shot like a javelin from the lighted street into the deep forest-night of Central park.

What would Clay say? But, after all, he had failed her in a crisis. Perhaps he had turned his heart elsewhere. Men were impatient, vindictive, fickle.

When Claremont was reached and Duane handed Miss Kip out he noted that her hand was hotter than his own and a little quick to escape, her face was flushed and her lips parted as if with excitement. He assumed that the speed of the ride and the tang of adventure were to blame.

While the waiters were serving the supper and while he was attacking it with the frank appetite of honest hunger she recounted the evening's disaster as calmly as if it were the story of somebody else. In fact, she was standing off and regarding herself with the eyes of an alien. We change so fast that the persons we were yesterday are already strangers, and their acts the acts of distant relatives. Her calm was really the numbness of shock. The anguish would come tomorrow.

"Go Home and Get Married."

"I can't understand myself at all," Daphne said. "I went through every one of the motions, but I couldn't reach the audience once. I was like a singer with a bad cold singing in a foreign language—you don't know what the song is all about, but you know that it never quite gets on the key."

"You mustn't be discouraged."

"Oh, yes, I must! I couldn't be an actress in a thousand years. Mr. Batterson told me so himself."

Duane felt the truth of this, but it hurt him to have her feel it. It offended his chivalry to realize how impolite fate could be to so pretty a girl. He hated to see her reduced to the necessity of proving how plucky she could be. He tried to find an escape for her. He said:

"You're far too good for the stage."

"I don't believe that for a minute," she protested. "But I've got to find something I can do."

"May I help you to decide?"

"If you only would! But I'm getting to be a nuisance."

"You are a—a—to me you are a—well, you're not a nuisance."

He dared not tell her what she was, especially as the waiter had set the bill at his elbow and was standing off in an attitude of ill-concealed impatience for the tip, which he knew would be large. Mr. Duane always gave the normal ten per cent and a bit extra. He tipped wisely but not too well, knowing that an extravagant tip wins a waiter's contempt almost more than none at all. The head waiter fairly cooed "Good night" and almost gave them a blessing.

The starter had Mr. Duane's car waiting for him at the curb and lifted his hat with one hand as he smuggled a quarter away with the other. He stepped in to lay the linen laprobe over their knees with reverence, closed the door exquisitely and murmured, "Good night!"

The car was an aristocrat; it floated from the curb with a swanlike sweep.

Daphne thought of Clay and herself plodding homeward. She seemed to see them or their wraiths staggering disconsolately along. She felt very sorry for them. Here was a chance to save one of them—both of them, in fact; for in taking her financial burden from Clay's shoulders she would be twice strengthening him. If she were to accept Duane as her husband then her problems would be solved—and Clay would be free of her.

To be Mrs. Tom Duane; to step into the society of society; to lift her father and mother from a position of meekness in Cleveland to a post of distinction in New York; to solve at once all the hateful, loathsome, belittling riddles of money; to be the beleweled and feted and idolized wife and mistress of this young American grand duke; to buy that impossible trousseau, or better, to live in a New York palace instead of a flat; to go about in her own limousine instead of an occasional taxicab; to be fortune's darling instead of a member of the working classes, struggling along with bent neck under a yoke beside a discouraged laboring man!

When the car reached her building she was resolved to see Duane no more. She could not tell him so. After all, he had been everything that was courtesy and charity. It would hardly have been polite to treat him with absolute indifference. Duane got down and helped her out and took her to the door, which was locked at this late hour. While they waited for the doorman to answer the bell she was paying him his wages.

"You are wonderfully kind. I had a gorgeous evening. You saved my life."

She had said more than she intended—if not more than he had earned.

"Then may I call soon?"

"Of course."

"Tomorrow?"

"I—well, I'll let you know."

"Fine! Telephone me at—. I'll write it out for you. I'm not often at from where she would have gone as Mrs. Duane.

But when she was in her room she tore his card to pieces—after she had looked at it. She stared at her image in the mirror. She hated what she saw there.

She vowed to break her promise to Tom Duane. She vowed to forget his telephone number. But it danced about in the dark long after she had closed her eyes.

The next morning she overslept even beyond the extra hour the Chivvises permitted themselves and the stranger within their gates on Sundays.

When Daphne appeared at breakfast, trying not to yawn, Mrs. Chivvis greeted her with a voice as cold and dry as the toast, and as brittle:

"You were rather late getting in last night—or this morning, rather."

Daphne's answer was not an explanation, but it was better:

"Oh, I know it, Mrs. Chivvis, but I lost my position last night. Yes! I played the principal part and killed it, and now I'm not going on the stage any more."

Mrs. Chivvis was touched. "You poor child! It really is—just too bad!" She pondered, then she brightened: "I'm sorry you're disappointed, but I'm glad you're not to be in the theater. It must be very wicked."

"It's mighty difficult," said Daphne.

Mrs. Chivvis thought a moment more, then she said:

"Did I tell you?— No, I don't believe I did—you were away—but Mr. Chivvis gets his vacation next week. He's got to take it when his turn comes. The man who was going now couldn't be spared, so we have to leave Tuesday. I'm going, of course, so I can't give you your meals. You can get your breakfasts in the kitchenette. Of course I'll allow off whatever is right."

"Oh," Daphne said. "I'll be all right, I guess."

Daphne had not realized how much she depended on Mrs. Chivvis till now. She was to be left alone at the very time when she was most in need of society. The whole world was forsaking her.

CHAPTER XIII.

When the Chivvises had gone Daphne assailed the task of composing her letter of resignation from Reben's employ. It was not easy to resign with dignity and the necessary haste.

She sent it off by messenger. It was none too prompt, for Reben had already dictated a very polite request for Daphne's head. When he received her letter he recalled his stenographer and dictated a substitute for his first letter. In this he expressed his regret at learning Daphne's decision to resign, the former understudy had come back from the road, he said, and would resume her work. He begged Daphne to accept the inclosed check for two weeks' salary in lieu of the usual notice, and hoped that she would believe him faithfully hers.

Daphne felt a proud impulse to return the fifty dollars. She wrote a letter to go with it. She looked again, and saw it was the first money she had ever earned. She hated to let it go. She decided to frame it and keep it to point to in after years as the beginning of her great fortune.

Late in the afternoon, when the western sky was turning into a loom for crimson tapestries almost as rich as her own dreams, she went to her brother's apartment.

There the New Girl found the Old Woman in the throes of finance. Leila had brought her check book and her bank book to her husband. Her affairs were in a knot.

He laughingly offered to help her. She was hurt by his laughter, but not half so deeply as he was by his discovery of her monetary condition. He had established her bank account in a mood of adoration, a precious sacrifice on the altar of love. She had not cherished it, but scattered it heedlessly. And money was peculiarly precious now in the final agonies of the hard times, when only the fittest of the fittest could survive the last tests. Credit was the water cask, and dollars were the hard biscuits of a boatload of survivors from a wreck. Land might be reached if they held out, but self-denial was vital.

Bayard gazed at Leila with wondering love and terror. She was both divinity and devil in his eyes. He groaned:

"Are you trying to wreck me? You know how hard I'm working and how much I need money in my business and how much it means to your future, but you won't stop buying and charging and burning my poor little earnings. We discharged a stenographer yesterday because we wanted to save her salary of fifteen dollars—and here's a check for a pair of shoes for you that cost sixteen."

"But tell me one thing more before I'm carted off to Bloomingdale in a straitjacket. Why, in heaven's name, why—admitting you just had to have that pitiful little pair of shoes—why, when you wrote the check, didn't you subtract it from your balance instead of adding it? I as' you!"

"Oh, did I do that?" she asked, looking over his shoulder. "So I did!" and she put her cheek close to his and giggled.

He shook his head in imbecile infatuation, and drew her around into his arms.

That was what Daphne overheard when the maid let her in. She found Leila resting in Bayard's lap.

Bayard did not tell Daphne what his conference with Leila had been. He simply closed the check book and the bank book and said to Leila: "I'll send the bank my check for thirty-eight cents and ask 'em to close their account. They'll be mighty glad to do it."

"And so will I," said Leila. "It was awfully hard work keeping track of every little penny. I'd much rather have a regular allowance in cash every week."

"Oh, Did I Do That?" She Asked, Looking Over His Shoulder.

"All right!" said Bayard. "We'll try that—next week."

Daphne was not told what all this talk was about, but she made a fair guess, though she pretended not to.

She told about her failure and her future and Leila praised her courage and her optimism. They dined cheerfully and Bayard decided that the best preparation for the hard work ahead of him would be an evening of gayety. He invited his wife and his sister to go with him to the Winter Garden, where the typical "Sunday concert" of New York was given.

Al Jolson's Spanish Hit from "Sinbad"

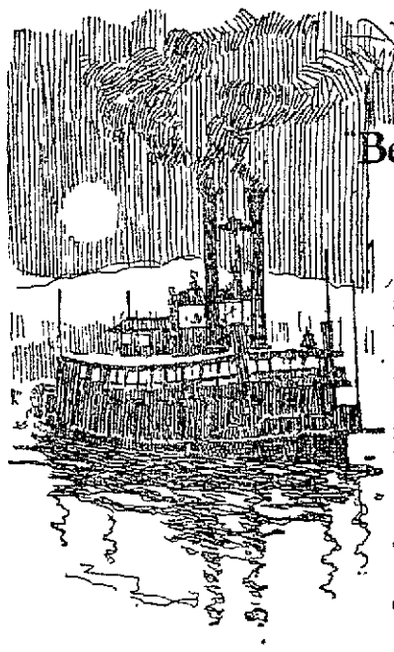
"I Wonder Why She Kept on Saying Si-Si-Si-Senor"—that's the title of Al Jolson's latest, biggest "Sinbad" hit. When you hear this ditty of the Senorita and her bolero, as Jolson sings it, you won't wonder—you'll roar! It's Jolson at his very best. On the back "Oh! Susie Behave."

A 2671—85c

"The Rose of No Man's Land"

Among all the beautiful ballads that immortalize in song the heroism and sacrifice of the great war, none has a truer heart appeal than this song which glorifies the Red Cross Nurse — the "Rose of No Man's Land." Hugh Donovan sings it with rare feeling. On the back is "Over Yonder Where the Lilies Grow."

A 2670—85c



"Beautiful Ohio"—a Dreamy Moonlight Waltz

A moonlight night on the broad, rippling Ohio—a river steamer gliding along between wooded banks—the soft strains of dreamy southern music—all these are suggested in "Beautiful Ohio," a new waltz of wonderful fascination. On the back, "My Belgian Rose."

JOE STECHER GETS RELEASE

Heavyweight Wrestler Gained Twenty Pounds Since Enlistment—Plans to Take Rest.

Twenty pounds heavier than when he joined the service, Joe Stecher, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, has received his discharge from the navy at the Great Lakes naval training station. Stecher, weighing 220 pounds, said he was in the best condition of his career. He plans to rest for several weeks before accepting any engagements.

The Suggestion.

"Pop are lawyers in court always bad tempered?"

"Of course not. Why do you ask that?"

"Why, the papers talk so about their cross examinations."

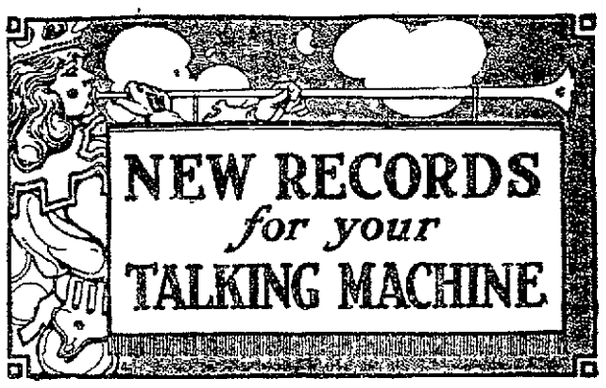
Up to Date.

The Man—What is an appropriate gift for a baby?

Clerk—How old is the child?

The Man—About three weeks.

Clerk—Would you like to see something in cigars or playing cards?



The greatest song of the great war was not a war song at all. In fact it was written long years before the war broke out. But the exquisately tender sentiment of its wonderful words and the marvelous melody of its haunting refrain made "The Long, Long Trail" the most popular of thousands and thousands of songs that were sung during the past three years. Many artists have sung it, many quartettes have harmonized it—from lusty doughboys over there to vaudeville teams along Broadway. But it has remained for Riccardo Stracciari to make the supreme rendition of this immortal melody. On a new Columbia record, out this month, you can hear the great baritone of the Metropolitan Opera sing "There's a Long, Long Trail" with the vibrant, rich, blended feeling that only Stracciari can put into a song. The Columbia excellent quartette comes in with superb harmony in the chorus. This is a great record—beautiful to hear and valuable to preserve as a souvenir of the great war.

Young Johnny Dunn went to fight the Hun—which he did to the queen's taste. Johnny was wounded after killing more Germans than he could tell, Johnny has been ministered unto by more Red Cross nurses than any one man, no matter how much of a hero, would have a right to. But Johnny "Ain't Got Weary Yet." That's the name of one of the snappiest catchiest popular song hits of the day. Arthur Fields and the Peerless Quartette sing it on one of the new Columbia records with an equally catchy ditty on the back which goes by the wonderful title of "Would You Rather be a Colonel With an Eagle on Your Shoulder, or a Private With a Chicken on Your Knee?"

What is there about a new baby and a new dance record that always creates interest? Far be it from us to answer so abstruse a question. But the fact remains that new dance records are interesting. There's a mighty smart new dance record out this month by Columbia as full of new stunts and steps as a Jazz Band is full of trombone notes. By all means buy "My Baby Boy" Medley One-Step by Prince's Band. There is another Medley Fox-Trot on the back.

accept the resignations because he would have had to create another commission, and as he does not approve of the commission as it exists under the present law he did not desire to name another body

No announcement has been made of Governor Sproul's intentions regarding the Department of Labor and Industry Before the legislature ends its sessions, however, the Workmen's Compensation Board will have been separated from the Labor and Industry department. The suggestion has been made that the department be merged in the Internal Affairs department under Secretary James H Woodward who takes office in May Dr John Price Jackson head of the department is in France, and the acting commissioner is former Senator Walter McNichols of Scranton Dr Jackson will not last long after his return, it is said, but in the meantime nothing has been given out relative to McNichols It is not expected, however, that McNichols will remain permanently In his inaugural address the governor intimated that he is not entirely satisfied with everything in the Labor and Industry department, although he had praise for certain of its activities.

One big department merger contemplated is that which would consolidate the Forestry department, Water Supply commission, Fish and Game commissions. It is the opinion of state leaders that the activities of these four departments might well be conducted under one head, with the State Police force to enforce the laws. Experts are now at work on a bill which will bring the four together, and it is said that the commissioner who will head the department will be Thomas J Lynch, secretary of the Water Supply Commission, and executive secretary under Governors Pennypacker, Stuart and Tener Mr. Lynch, whose home is in Bethlehem has made a careful study of not only Pennsylvania's water supply, but also of the relation the forests bear to the water supply, and to the conservation and increasing of the forest reserves Bureaus of this department will deal with separate activities, but direction will be from the commissioner

When the Legislature convenes at 9 o clock tonight there will be a flood of bills in both house and senate The senate got a start last week but the house was handicapped because its committees had not been named. Bills presented in the house were turned over to Secretary Thomas H Garvin, who will make them public tonight.

The House and Senate Monday night will very likely announce the names of the hundreds of employes of the 1919 session The 1917 employes held over under the law and the machinery was in their hands at the sessions so far held The new crew will in all likelihood be on hand tonight to take over jobs

During the last week there has been renewed activity throughout the state over the question of better roads for Pennsylvania. This activity seems to be spasmodic and is usually at its height in the late winter and early spring months of the year, when the highways of Pennsylvania are mudbound—except the 3,000 miles that have been improved.

There were numerous delegations in the city during the week and several asked Highway Commissioner Lewis S Sadler to attend organization meetings of county Good Roads associations and deliver addresses on the aims and purposes of the highway department Commissioner Sadler, however, declined all invitations of this sort. He takes the ground that having been on the job only a week—his name went to the Senate last Tuesday it would be well if he were to wait until he has made a study of the highway department and existing conditions before going on record Consequently the commissioner will hardly be heard from for a number of weeks Highway enthusiasts are very well pleased with the selection of Mr Sadler, whose record as an executive is hard to equal

The Highway department, the governor and state's financial experts will within a few weeks present to the legislature the bill through which Pennsylvania will be able to borrow money for road construction under the authority given by the people of the commonwealth in November when they gave the $50,000 000 road loan a 262,000 majority

Numerous attempts will be made during the session to get new lengths of highway added to the so-called "Sproul system" of state highways, but these attempts will very likely be as futile as the similar and numerous efforts made during the 1917 session

TYRUS COBB INTENDS QUITTING BASEBALL

Tiger's Star Player, Back From War, Is Tired of Game.

Says War Has Rejuvenated Sport and That "It Is Going to Boom This Season as It Has Never Done Before"

Ty Cobb, Detroit's great baseball star, intends to quit baseball He so stated on his return from France, where he has served as a captain in the chemical warfare section of the army He had no intention at present, he said, of signing up again

Cobb is several pounds below playing weight, yet an excellent specimen of the American army officer He has lost considerably in beef and admits being far from in his usual condition. Long tramps through France and exposure in embarking at Brest France have left the "peach" in a physical slump

"I am not what you would call a sick man," said Ty, "but the doctor probably would order me to bed if he had a chance"

"I'm going down to my home in Augusta, Ga., and rest up for several months," said Cobb "I intend to break away from baseball I'm tired of it. I've had 15 years of it, and I want to quit while I'm still good. There is the danger that the fascination of the game has its hold on me, but I shall make every effort to tear away from it and not sign with any club again."

Captain Ty Cobb.

Cobb declared that the war had rejuvenated baseball and that "it's going to boom this season as it has never done before."
